March Course & Grounds Report

Frozen Greens, Spring Thaw and Playing on Greens in March

Pore Spacing. Putting green soils will freeze deeper than other soils because of the cultural practices we use to maintain healthy turf during stressful summer conditions. Aeration and sand topdressing create larger spaces between soil particles. Spaces between soil particles fall into two groups: macro-pores and micro-pores. A good soil has equal amounts of both. The larger macro-pores are the spaces between soil particles that allow water to drain and air to remain. Macro-pore spaces allow water, nutrients and oxygen to penetrate the soil profile and enter the root zone. The smaller micro-pore spaces hold water and nutrients for the roots to use over a period of time. Soils that are aerated and topdressed with sand will have more macro-pores than non-aerated soils and thus allow more cold air to penetrate deeper into the soil and freeze more soil particles than would be frozen in more compacted soils. Macro-pores or larger pore spaces are extremely important to the grass plant during the stresses that occur during the golf season. Macro-pores allow water, nutrients, and oxygen to get deep into the root system of a soil which then supports the leaves of the plant which is the putting green surface.

Two problems occur when playing on greens that are not completely thawed. They both begin when air temperatures rise and the greens slowly start to thaw from the top of the playing surface eventually down into the soil profile. The first problem is from foot traffic compaction and how it decreases the size of pore spaces between each soil particle. Until the entire soil profile is thawed, a frozen layer will remain and the water from above the frozen layer has no place to drain. This trapped water in the upper layer then acts as a lubricant around each soil particle. As force from foot traffic is applied to these super-saturated soil particles they become unable to stack on top of one another and get squished together which decreases the size of their pore spaces. As pore spaces shrink they are less able to hold air and more likely to hold water which does not allow necessary oxygen to travel to the root system.

Root shearing. The second concern when playing on partially thawed greens occurs when force is applied to the upper portion of the grass plant which has been thawed and shifts with force from foot traffic over the frozen root system. The frozen roots which cannot move with the force are then sheared off the plant. Since the leaves are not supported by water and nutrients from the roots they then die.

SEVEN OAKS COUNTRY CLUB
BRYAN BRAUND GENERAL MANAGER

Dear Members,

I hope this note finds you well and enjoying the early signs of a new season at Seven Oaks Country Club. I wanted to follow up on the work we completed during our January closure and share a few exciting updates as we continue to move forward together.

Thanks to the incredible efforts of our staff, the full Club deep-clean, new menus, paint touch-ups and programming have been completed. Items like staff training, mobile app, website design and system upgrades are underway. We are confident in the future benefits of these improvements across the Club, from smoother operations to more consistent service and a more connected member experience.

Your feedback from the December survey played a meaningful role in shaping many of these changes, and we truly appreciate the time you took to share your thoughts.

I would also like to extend a heartfelt thank you to everyone who joined us for Valentine's weekend. The grille room was filled with energy, warmth and celebration and it was a pleasure to see so many members enjoying time together at the Club. Your support of these special events allows us to continue building memorable experiences for our Club.

I am pleased to share that the bag room renovation is now complete and members may begin bringing their golf bags back for storage prior to golf season. Please check for Golf Shop hours before arriving. Our team is ready to assist you and we look forward to welcoming you back as we prepare for another great golf season.

As we look ahead, there is even more to be excited about. One of our most anticipated updates is the upcoming rebranding of the Grille Room. On April 1, we will reveal the new logo for the 1978 Tavern! Members will experience a refreshed atmosphere and a new menu that blends classic tavern fare, member favorites and modern culinary touches. We cannot wait to share this next chapter with you.

Thank you again for your continued support, your engagement and your trust in our team. We look forward to seeing you around the Club very soon.

Warm regards.

Service Charge Notice:

Seven Oaks Country Club applies a service charge to all Food and Beverage purchases, including banquets. This charge is not a direct gratuity to individual service staff. Instead, it supports the Club's compensation model, which provides servers and bartenders with consistently higher, market-competitive wages that exceed traditional tipped wage structures. This approach allows Seven Oaks to attract and retain professional, experienced service staff while ensuring fair and stable compensation across the team. If a member feels they have received truly exceptional service, additional gratuities are welcomed and appreciated by the staff.

2026 Cabana Booking:

We're happy to offer one Cabana at the Pool for daily reservations! Please note that the Cabana will not be available for booking on holidays. Pre-bookings will open on March 1, 2026, and reservations can be made one day at a time.
